STARTING BASELINE

Example Starting Point

A neutral snapshot before the week begins.

Describe what is true now. No scoring, diagnosis, or ideal version required.

CURRENT RHYTHM

Workdays are structured; evenings often run later than intended.

WHAT SUPPORTS ME

Morning daylight, a prepared water bottle, and sessions written into the calendar.

MOVEMENT I WANT MORE ROOM FOR

Two unhurried strength sessions plus easy walking on three days.

A KIND, PRACTICAL INTENTION

Build a repeatable week, not a perfect one.

MONTHLY HABITS

A Balanced Month | Example

One practical week showing habits, movement, strength, energy, and recovery.

INTENTION

Protect steady cues: wind-down, water nearby, and movement planned before the week fills.

Mark what happened. Empty squares are information, not failure.

Recovery is part of the rhythm. Notice what restored capacity and what asked for less.

WHAT RESTORED ME

Three easy walks, one quieter evening, and leaving margin in both strength sessions.

WHAT FELT HEAVY

Thursday work demands made the late afternoon feel crowded.

ENERGY PATTERN

Most steady before lunch; lower after long meeting blocks.

RECOVERY PATTERN

Earlier wind-down made the following morning feel less rushed.
